Integrated Media and Liberal Studies Major

Film Minor

Media Studies Minor

The Department of Film and Media offers two majors: the Bachelor of Fine Arts in Digital Filmmaking and the Bachelor of Science in Integrated Media. In addition a film minor and a media studies minor are also available. The department cooperatively offers the Bachelor of Science in Fashion Communication and the Integrated Media and Liberal Studies Major. With the film and media industry continually evolving because of new media and technology, students learn the changing nature of media through real-world projects. Students experience the power of media and communicating a message to an audience, as well as the responsibility and ethics of creating media.

Requirements for Bachelor of Fine Arts in Digital Filmmaking

The Bachelor of Fine Arts major in Digital Filmmaking offers intensive training in all aspects of filmmaking to prepare students for the rapidly growing employment opportunities for women in the filmmaking industry. The elements of the major combine hands-on video production courses with courses on film theory and current trends in the film industry. By the time a student has reached her junior year, she will choose a track to focus on either narrative filmmaking or documentary filmmaking. Many students take both documentary and narrative film courses.

Film students will spend their senior year directing and producing their own short film and marketing this film to an audience. The senior projects will be screened to the public and possibly chosen for television broadcast or included in a DVD compilation. The films will also be reviewed by professionals in the film industry for critique and input on career goals. The student is expected to pay for all expenses associated with her project. Along with the senior film project, each student will also graduate with a student reel that includes samples of her work.

Because of the rigorous nature of the major, students are expected to demonstrate a level of dedication, effort and ethical behavior consistent with that demanded within the profession. Any student who, in the collective judgment of the department faculty in consultation with the department chair, fails at any time to live up to these standards may be required to withdraw from the DFM major. Some of the courses will be taught in intensive workshops and master classes given by industry professionals.

The bachelor of fine arts major in Digital Filmmaking requires completion of liberal arts requirements, 63 semester hours in the major as specified below and 26 semester hours of electives. The final capstone project must be a completed film that the student directs and produces and a digital portfolio of her film work. An overall GPA of at least 2.0 in all DFM courses listed in the major is required. All students are required to take the Summer Film Institute between their freshman and sophomore year, and an internship between their junior and senior year. The internship can be taken with any company/organization/film production within the film industry. An internship might even be taken abroad. Upon entering the film program, students will be required to buy their own personal hard drive for storing and editing their movies. Please consult with a film faculty member before making any purchase.

Requirements for the B.S. Major in Integrated Media

In Stephens' Integrated Media program, students are prepared to become proficient communicators who can effectively tell compelling messages across various media platforms. You will explore the quickly changing field of online media that includes social media like blogs and podcasts, while learning traditional journalism skills in print writing, and television and radio production. Students are prepared for success in today's media industry through a mix of hands-on production courses, media studies theory classes, and real-world projects. You'll gain experience in online media, digital video production, graphic design, PR writing and photography. In your senior year, you'll integrate the media skills into a cohesive project with work on an online news magazine, while having the opportunity to specialize in a specific area of media.

The faculty encourages and advises majors to complement in-depth study of mass media with courses that provide breadth to their total education. Many students decide to complete minors in disciplines such as graphic design, film, business, or psychology. Students are also encouraged to participate in one of our study abroad programs.

The bachelor of science major in integrated media requires completion of liberal arts requirements, core and emphasis area hours in the major and an industry internship specified below.
